Objective of the Programme

This Faculty Development Programme is intended to help faculty think about sustainability in relation to their discipline, to their own expertise, to the content they chose to teach, and to the pedagogy they employed. We have been concerned, too, that faculty move to rethink their work in relation to the mission aimed at addressing issues relating to the environment and to questions of sustainability. Faculty benefit most from being presented with a broad range of approaches, ideas, and resources. Education for sustainability is linked to content and pedagogy. One way to help faculty move toward sustainability is to provide opportunities for them to step outside of the narrow boundaries of their disciplines and departments, to talk to each other, to share ideas and insights, and to see themselves as essential participants in a larger project.
